Missed the Children.

A traveling man was stranded over Sunday in a small town in the west where there was a street fair in progress. He walked about and could find nothing to do until he came upon a place where various prizes were offered for knocking over rag dolls by throwing baseballs at them—three shots for a nickel.

He threw three balls and hit nothing. He tried three more and hit nothing. He invested several more nickels and still had no luck. Finally he went back to his hotel in disgust and wrote to his wife:

"Dear Wife—You cannot imagine how lonesome I am here. Indeed, I have been missing the children all the afternoon"—Saturday Evening Post.

PUTTING FORTH SPECIAL EFFORTS

Afraid Town Cannot Handle Visitors
Pennsylvania Monument Commission Head Asks Retail Merchants' Association to Take up Matter.

Fearing that under ordinary conditions Gettysburg would not be able to accommodate the thousands of visitors who are expected for the monument dedication on September 27, a request has been sent by the Monument Commission to the local Retail Merchants Association to help to provide entertainment for the visitors.

General Huidekoper, chairman of the commission on the occasion of a recent visit here, stated that free transportation to the dedication of the Pennsylvania monument would be issued by his commission for about 4000 veterans of Pennsylvania regiments who were engaged in the battle of Gettysburg. He estimates that those having free transportation will be accompanied by members of their families to the number of 2000. Most of these are expected to arrive in Gettysburg on Saturday, Sept. 24, and remain until after the 27th.

General Huidekoper is greatly concerned over the question of the accommodation of these people. He has asked the Retail Merchants' Association to take an interest in that part suggesting that a list of hotels and boarding houses be printed and sent him. This list will be mailed to all prospective visitors with their transportation certificate.

With the certain coming of 6000 veterans and members of their families and the others without direct connection, who are attracted by such occasions, it is believed that extraordinary efforts should be put forth locally to receive and satisfactorily care for them.

All proprietors of hotels and boarding houses are requested to write at one to Entertainment Committee, Room 208, First National Bank Building, stating number they can accommodate and rates per day.

This printed list must be in General Huidekoper's hands by Saturday, September 24. It is hoped that all concerned will see the necessity of prompt action.

HAD 25 RATTLES

What is believed to be the largest as well as the oldest rattle snake ever killed in this section of the state, met its doom on the property of Perry Zeigler, located on the South Mountains, and near the summer mansion on top the mountains, owned by James Cameron, of Harrisburg.

Mr. Zeigler is a resident of Philadelphia now, and formerly was a well known agent for the Mt. Holly Paper Company. During the latter part of last week he had several men clearing a large quantity of shrubbery and smaller growth from his land, and several snakes were encountered and killed. Two were rattlers.

After one was dispatched it was measured, and to the great astonishment of these mountaineer workmen, the reptile totaled a length of five feet, four inches, and had twenty five rattles and a button. It is believed this snake was about twenty seven years old. The other rattler was a small one and had ten rattles and a button.

FARMER FALLS DEAD AT BARN

David Rohrbaugh, Well Known Resident of Mount Joy Township, Dies Suddenly while Engaged in Morning Work.

David Rohrbaugh, a widely known resident of Mount Joy township, was found dead at the barn on Sunday morning by his son, Clayton, death evidently having been caused by heart failure.

Mr. Rohrbaugh had gone to the barn before breakfast and when he stayed longer than usual his son went to tell him that the morning meal was ready. The body of his father was soon found near the barn and an examination showed that death had occurred a short time before. He was aged about 55 years.

Surviving are his wife and four children, Mrs. Charles Epley, of near Two Taverns; Clayton, Edna and Mary at home. Three sisters and one brother also survive, Mrs. Andrew Kuhn, of near Littlestown; Miss Barbara Rohrbaugh, of Germantown, Philadelphia; Miss Joanna Rohrbaugh, of Littlestown; and U. F. Rohrbaugh, of near Two Taverns.

Funeral Thursday morning at the house at nine o'clock. Services and interment at St. James church.

JAMES S. STONESIFER

After an illness of nine months, suffering with dropsy, James S. Stonesifer died at his home on Sixth street, McSherrystown, at 6:15 a. m. Monday. He was aged 74 years, 7 months and 22 days.

The deceased who was a son of the late James Stonesifer, Sr., was a native of Carroll county Md., moving to Brushtown Adams county, where he lived for a number of years, until taking up his residence in McSherrystown several years ago. He was married to Miss Louisa Sipe, of York, who survives him with the following children: Augustus Stonesifer, of York; Samuel, of Reading; Mrs. Charles Kemper, of Menges Mills; Mrs. Lewis S. Culp, of McSherrystown, and Miss Cecelia Stonesifer, at home. He is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Katie Yost, of Hanover, and a brother living in Indiana. Thirty two grandchildren are living.

Mr. Stonesifer was a veteran of the Civil War, having served as a Corporal of Co. H, 165th Pennsylvania Drafted Militia. He was discharged at Gettysburg July 29th, 1863. In September, 1864, he enlisted as a private in Co. G, 208th Pennsylvania Infantry, and served until discharged May 31, 1865, at Alexandria, Virginia.

MATINEE ON SEPTEMBER 10

Gettysburg Driving Club Decides to Have Racing Event on that Date. To Get Entries from Other Counties.

At a meeting of the Gettysburg Driving Club held on Monday evening it was decided among other things to hold the first matinee on the track west of town on Saturday, September 10. Special efforts are being made to make this meet an exceptional success.

Invitations have been sent to all the driving clubs in York, Franklin and Cumberland counties to participate and the usual number of fine horses from this county are expected to be entered. The entries must all be in the hands of the president, Ben. F. Kindig, or the secretary, Edgar C. Tawney, on Thursday, September 8, at which time a meeting will be held and the entries classified. The prizes to be offered will also be decided upon at this meeting.

The track committee has been instructed to place the track in shape immediately so that it may be in good condition for the matinee. The club has granted permission to all, whether or not members, to use the track free of charge from now until the time of the racing event.

The September matinees have always proved the most successful in the past and local lovers of the sport hope that the efforts of the Driving Club may be as successful in arranging for this one as in managing those held in other years.

WITH THE BALL PLAYERS

On Monday evening the United Brethren team expected to play off their postponed St. James game and were out on the field promptly at six o'clock. St. James did not appear and claim that no game had been arranged for.

Gettysburg admirers of the Athletics who have been watching their successful campaign this season are now looking forward to the entertainment of the entire team at this place by "Eddie" Plank. They hope that the suggested game with a college team can be arranged.

So much excellent material has been developed by the Sunday School base ball league that it would seem that Gettysburg should have an exceptional good town team. It is probable that next summer the material developed this year may be organized into a first class nine.

The county town base ball teams have not been displaying their usual activity in most instances this year though several towns have aggregations of which they are justly proud. Arentsville has been specially noticeable in capturing games while East Berlin has a string of victories to its credit. York Springs, McKnightstown and several other teams have also been playing creditable ball.

Though Gettysburg has always been a good base ball town and has always followed closely the progress of its favorite team, the Athletics, it is doubtful if there has ever been so much interest as this year in big league games. The probable capture of the American League pennant by the Philadelphia team is now causing local fans to speculate on the probable success of their pet team in the world's series later on.

GYPSIES LEAVE FOR GRANGERS

But will Return Soon again to Try to Recover from Gettysburg People the Money they were Compelled to Pay the County.

The band of gypsies which had spent the past week here have left to ply their peculiar trade at the Grangers' picnic at Williams' Grove. They will return later, however, to stay here for several more weeks. The general alarm over their presence here will now subside for a while only to be resumed upon their return.

Since the band threatened to get back all the money they had to pay in fine and license hundreds of Gettysburg people have been alarmed for fear they would be among those whom the gypsies would single out as victims. There has been a general locking of doors and fastening of windows ever since it became known that the nomads had set their minds to get out of town all they had left here and it is said that people even hesitate to leave the front portions of their homes without first closing the doors.

Up to the present time there have been no reports of any crooked work having been done by the wanderers but this may be due to the vigilance of Gettysburg people. The women have been very persistent in their efforts to tell fortunes and are said to have secured no little revenue in this way.

HEARD ON THE STREETS

Gettysburg is at last promised a real live Labor Day celebration on next Monday when the county P. O. S. of A. convention will be held. The parade in the afternoon promises to be the interesting feature and several base ball games will likely be arranged.

Work on the new residences which are being erected in various parts of town is going along rapidly and several more handsome structures will be completed before many months have passed by. The new $10,000 refectory at the Seminary will be ready for occupancy next month. George Taylor moves into his new home on West Middle street on Thursday.

The curb market is producing various articles for sale no usually seen at such a place. One man on Saturday offered some bull dog puppies for sale while another had a bicycle which was awaiting a purchaser.

Gettysburg and various sections of the county are sending out numerous camping parties this year and the banks of the streams in the county are lined with the campers all of whom report the best possible times.

Joseph and Harry Leach, of Dixon, Illinois, who are visiting their nephew, Harry Leach, and other relatives in this place after an absence of forty years advise the young men and women of this section to go west. Mr. Leach says "The ladies can get good wages. The young men can get $30.00 a month if they are sober and steady." He says he will gladly answer all inquiries sent to him at R. D. 3 Polo, Ogle County, Illinois.

RETURNS FROM TRIP

Samuel Bream, of Biglerville, who went on a tramping trip to Maryland last week has just returned and says he had a very pleasant trip. Mr. Bream says he found walking good and plenty of it. He was cordially received in all the homes at which he stopped and was asked to call again. He speaking of his trip he says "I was not put in the barn to pass the night but was given the good bed in the spare room. It is very dry about Frederick City, no rain since June. The pasture land is dried up. Some farmers are now feeding their cattle the winter feed. Corn is a short half crop."

There's a young man in one of the big furniture exhibition buildings in Chicago who since a recent experience never permits his temper to become ruffled while at the telephone.

A few days ago he could not get the number he called for as quickly as he desired.

"See here, central," he shouted, "I'll report you."

"You don't know who I am," was the calm reply.

"Well, I'll find out, and that blamed quick too."

"I know you, though," came in a soft, sweet tone over the wire, "You're in the big office furniture building. I've seen your picture."

"You have?" exclaimed the young man delightedly, and he mentally kicked himself for having been so rude to so sweet a girl. "Where did you see it? Was it in the Furniture Journal?"

"No," came the laughing reply, "on a lobster can."—National Food Magazine.

HUMAN HEARTS

Good plays, like wine, improve with age. This is certainly true of that marvellously successful melodrama "Human Hearts" which Manager Reno offers for the coming season. The company to be seen in the play this season comprises all of last year's favorites, and wherever a part could be improved upon, the change has been made, and it is promised that never before has this beautiful play been so well presented. "Human Hearts" gives a pure, wholesome lesson that touches the heart strings in the pathetic scenes and excites the risibilities in the humorous ones. The pathos and comedy are so well blended that the audience is in tears one moment and convulsed with laughter the next. The scenic equipment will be perfect in every detail, so it is said, and the management has done everything possible to immerse a first class performance. Tonight at Walter's Theatre.

CURE FOR SUMMER COMPLAINT

At no time of the year are the bowels put to a severer test than during the hot weather. Thousands become afflicted with "summer complaint," or running off of the bowels. The cause very often lies in the drinking of impure water, the eating of unripe fruit or tainted food. But whatever the cause it is useless to try to cure the trouble with an astringent remedy, an opiate, or salts and such things. The bowels need not only a thorough cleaning out, but the stomach needs strengthening and toning, so that they may have a new start. All this is best obtained by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a great stomach, liver and bowel cleanser. It will quickly stop the unnatural passages, which are so weakening and give rise to vertigo. Thousands of families are using it steadily and thereby avoid all digestive troubles summer and winter. Buy a 50 cent or $1.00 bottle today of your druggist and you will be surprised at the quick and lasting effects. You will find it a mild, gentle laxative, agreeable to young and old. One hundred and sixty-five trees in one of the handsomest and best kept orchards in the locality in which the writer lives came to an untimely end last spring because of an ailment which is generally termed "sour sap." This is a sour or fermented condition of the sap of apple trees resulting from a rapid flow of sap induced by bright warm days in the spring followed by cold frosty nights. This condition seems to set the sap, more or less seriously interfering with its circulation, at times killing the tree outright or greatly impairing its vitality. The fact that this sort of damage is usually most noticeable on the southwest side of the trunk would seem to point to the fact that it is aggravated by an exposure to the direct rays of the sun. This may be overcome to some extent by whitewashing the trunks prior to the changeable and trying temperatures of winter and

CRIPPEN PLANNED TO KILL HIMSELF

Inspector Dew Found Card That Warned Him.

MURDER CHARGE SPECIFIC

Physician and Leneve Girl Arraigned in London and Held For Killing Belle Elmore.

London, Aug. 30.—Dr. Hawley H. Crippen and Miss Ethel Clara Leneve, his typist, were accused of the murder of Belle Elmore, Crippen's wife, in the formal charge read to them in the Bow street police court.

Miss Leneve was charged also with harboring and maintaining Crippen after the crime and while knowing that he committed it.

Inspector Dew introduced evidence to show that Crippen contemplated suicide while at sea following his flight.

Crippen was quoted also as declaring that his companion knew nothing of the trouble in which he was involved, and Miss Leneve was said to have protested her innocence.

Significance of the Charge.

There was special interest in the nature of the formal charge, as the warrant for the fugitives had merely laid at their door responsibility for the death of an unknown woman whose body was found in the cellar of the Crippen home at Hilldrop Crescent.

The fact that the prisoners were accused of the murder of Belle Elmore leads to the supposition that the mutilated body has been identified to the satisfaction of the authorities.

It also suggests that the police believe they have further evidence of Miss Leneve's connection with the tragedy than they have made known.

The proceedings consisted of the introduction of evidence and the prisoners were remanded until Sept. 6 with out having pleaded or made any comment.

Crippen and Miss Leneve stood together in the dock. He wore a gray frock suit, while his companion was dressed in a tailor-made suit of blue.

The prosecutor explained that the government's evidence against Miss Leneve pointed only to her as being an accessory after the fact. He said he proposed at this time to offer only formal evidence. A week hence the prosecution would be ready to proceed with the case.

Explaining his suspicion that Crippen had planned suicide, Inspector Dew exhibited to the court a business card upon one side of which were the words: "P. Robinson & Co., Michigan Presented by John E. Robinson."

Had Thoughts of Suicide.

This card was found among Crippen's effects and on the back of it, apparently in the doctor's handwriting, was the following: "I cannot stand the horror I go through every night any longer, and as I see nothing bright ahead and my journey is coming to an end I have made up my mind to jump overboard tonight."

"I know I have spoiled your life, but some day you may learn to forgive me. My last words are of love."

Dew also introduced a torn piece of a card on which Crippen had written this: "Shall we wait until tonight about 10 or 11? If not, what time?"

Inspector Dew said that Crippen told him that Miss Leneve "knew nothing about it. I never told her any thing."

KILLED IN CRAP GAME

Man Murdered in Quarrel Over Loss of a Quarter.

Sullivan, Ind., Aug. 30.—During a quarrel over the loss of a quarter in a crap game, Charles Burton, aged twenty-seven, shot and almost instantly killed August Staples, aged thirty-two years.

The shooting was witnessed by a dozen coal miners who had crowded around the game, which was under way on the sidewalk in front of the company's store. Three shots were fired, all taking effect near the heart. Staples fell to the street and was carried to the home of James Walker, where he died. Burton calmly rolled a cigarette after the shooting and walked away. He has not been captured.

Women in Oath Pact.

Evansville, Ind., Aug. 30.—As a result of a suicide pact Mrs. Mabel Williams, aged thirty-three, is dead, and Mrs. Lillian Dahler, aged thirty-two years, is critically ill. Mr. and Mrs. Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Dahler lived together. The women, it is said, had quarreled with their husbands and were despondent. Mrs. Dahler drank creosote and Mrs. Williams took carbolic acid.

Drought Makes Wild Animals Bold.

Marathon, Tex., Aug. 30.—The severe drought is causing panthers and wolves to become unusually bold in this section. Word was brought here by James Walker that a big panther attacked and killed two cows and a horse near his residence a few miles from town.

Where there is so water under pressure to refresh the parched lawn during the dry midsummer weather it is best to forego cutting it with a mower. When the rains come on and the grass gets a good start the clipping may be resumed.

GAYNOR RESTS AT HOME

Wounded Man Feels No Ill Effects of Trip From the Hospital.

St. James, L. I., Aug. 30.—Mayor Gaynor, who was removed Sunday from the hospital to his home here, shows no ill effects from his trip from Hoboken.

Rufus Gaynor said that his father had passed a comfortable night. He ate a good breakfast and seemed to relish his food.

For the present no visitors will be received unless they come by special invitation. A guard has been established at the house and callers are told that the mayor needs perfect quiet and rest.

It is a mercy to the played out and decrepit old family horse to end its miseries with a rifle ball rather than to sell it for $4.99 to some heartless brute who will exact the last pittance of toll from it and then kill it to boot. We don't believe that a man will get to heaven who does a thing of this kind, no matter how long he has been an elder or deacon in the church.

The plow is probably the oldest agricultural implement. The first plow used away back in the distant years was merely a crooked stick with a tough sharpened point, which just scratched the ground. It is a long step from this to the four horse gang plow which will turn over three or four acres per day and the steam or gasoline traction outfit which will turn over thirty acres.

You will be proud to tell your friends of this the oldest American Dentifrice.

Keep The Kidneys Well

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Gettysburg People Know How to Save it. Many Gettysburg people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all diseases and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is a Gettysburg citizen's recommendation.

Mrs. Charles Hartdagan, 47 Breckenridge Street, Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I consider Doan's Kidney Pills an excellent kidney medicine and I am just as willing to recommend them today as I was two years ago. I was troubled by rheumatism and I also had severe pains in my head. When Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention, I procured a supply at the People's Drug Store and commenced their use. I was cured and since then I have often recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to other kidney sufferers. I advise anyone afflicted with kidney complaint to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

For sale by all dealers. 41c 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Would Not Keep Her Back.

Saddler Sime was a droll character and yet of a type by no means scarce in the rural districts of the north of Scotland. One morning when a neighbor entered his shop he was greeted with the following: "Man, Jeemie, I had an awfu' dream last night. I thoct I saw my wife deelin' awa' up to heaven wi' a great big pair of weungs."

"Aye man, an' did ye ao try to pu' her back?"

"Na, na; I just clappit my hands an' cried, 'Shoo, shoo!' I was fearst she wad never hae anither chance of gettin' see near in."

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; none cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

THE HANDS

Of course you must use your hands, that's what you have them for, but—do you keep them from annoying you by soreness and cracking, do you keep them so they are not unsightly? There's an easy way to do this, and that's by using MANOLINE, at least twice a day.

There are 360 drops in a tube, and a drop is enough for an application. Costs 25c instead of One or Two Dollars.

Money back if not in every respect as represented.

URGES WATCH OVER COAL LANDS

Roosevelt Warmly Praises the Forestry Service.

TAKES RAP AT BALLINGER

Colonel Gives His Idea on the Conservation of Natural Resources in Vigorous Language.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 30.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt gave forth his idea on the conservation of the nation's natural resources before an audience of over 12,000 in the Auditorium, and in doing so made some references that had a bearing on the bitter controversy between Gifford Pinchot, the former chief forester, and Richard A. Ballinger, the secretary of the interior. Neither was mentioned by name, but the forest service, of which Pinchot was so long the head and the mouthpiece for the promulgation of the Roosevelt conservation policy, received unstinted praise. On the other hand, what was considered by many of the former president's audience a direct slap at Ballinger came in his discussion of the Alaska coal lands.

"These coal mines," declared the colonel, "should be leased, not sold, and those who mine the coal should give back part of their profit to the people." Then he added:

"It is the right and the duty of the people to demand the most vigilant trusteeship on the part of that branch of the federal government in charge of the fuel resources of the United States."

This he urged for the industrial development of the west and the needs of the navy in the Pacific.

Colonel Roosevelt made no direct reference to the Taft administration, but he denounced in strong terms bills that were introduced in the last session of congress with the purpose of transferring water power sites in the national forests and the public domain to the control of the states.

Then swinging rapidly into the discussion of the forest service, of which Pinchot was so long the controlling factor, he said:

"The forest service has enemies because it is effective. * * * Much of the opposition to the forest service, like much of the opposition to conservation, takes the form of direct misrepresentation. * * * Like the forest service, the reclamation service has clashed with certain private interests and has had to pay the penalty. * * * In the form of bitter opposition."

New York state politics crept into the speech for a minute, when the former president regretted that he would not be able to attend the sessions of the National Irrigation Congress, the latter part of September. Just about the time the Republican convention will meet at Saratoga, N. Y. "I must," he said, "be in the east at that time."

Colonel Roosevelt also aroused considerable interest by a definition of interstate commerce included in his speech.

"All commerce on a scale sufficiently large to warrant any control over it by the government is nowadays interstate or foreign commerce," he said. Until courts and legislative bodies recognized this, he declared, the interests of the people would suffer.

Roosevelt's Conservation Ideas.

"I do not believe that a single acre of our public lands should hereafter pass into private ownership except for the single purpose of homestead settlement. This is absolutely necessary on the agricultural lands. It is at least equally necessary on the mineral lands."

"The forest service has enemies because it is effective. Some of its best work has been met by the bitterest opposition."

"Much of the opposition to the forest service, like much of the opposition to conservation, takes the form of direct misrepresentation."

"Like the forest service, the reclamation service has clashed with certain private interests and has had to pay the penalty of its service to the public in the form of bitter opposition from those with whose profit it has interfered."

"This country has shown definite signs of waking up to the absolute necessity of handling its natural resources with foresight and common sense."

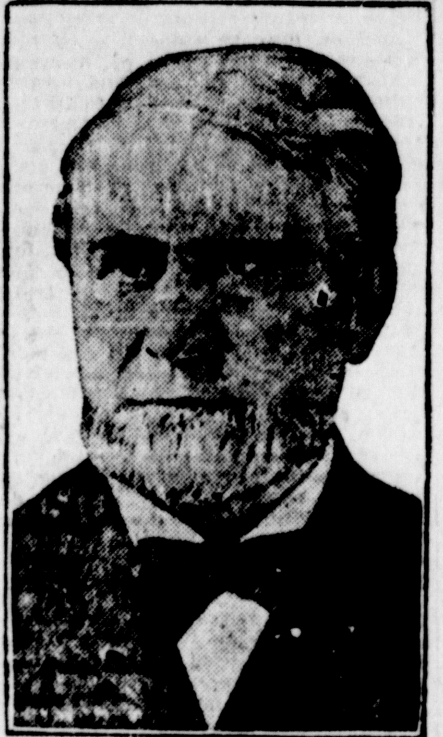

"In the first place, the needless waste of the natural resources must be stopped."

"In the second place, the natural resources must be developed promptly, completely and in orderly fashion."

"In the third place, so far as possible, these resources must be kept for the whole people and not handed over for exploitation to single individuals."

SENATOR NELSON.

Chairman of the Committee That Probed Ballinger-Pinchot Dispute.

AWAITS PINCHOT REPORT

Senator Nelson Says It May Possibly Be Given Out About Sept. 5.

Albany, Minn., Aug. 30.—Senator Knute Nelson, chairman of the joint congressional committee appointed at the last session of congress to investigate the so-called Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, said that he has not yet received word from any members of the committee as to whether they will attend the meeting of the committee to be held in Minneapolis Sept. 5.

Senator Nelson said that the meetings will be held for the purpose of considering the evidence submitted at the investigation. He thought it possible, but not probable, that a report would be made public at that time.

If the report is not made public next week it will be given out when congress convenes next December, he said.

BATHER IS BADLY INJURED BY DOGFISH

He Was Bleeding From Battle When Brought Ashore.

Bangor, Me., Aug. 30.—Fred H. Melloy, of New York, is under treatment here for severe wounds received in an attack by dogfish.

Malloy and John Wallace, also of New York, have been cruising in their motor boat Conqueror along the Maine coast. Diving off the boat while two miles off Islesboro, Malloy was surrounded by dogfish. His cries attracted Wallace, who put out after him and brought him ashore bleeding badly and nearly exhausted from his battle with the fish.

REFUSES TO MEET ROOSEVELT

Milwaukee's Socialist Mayor Gives Colonel's "Unfair Position" as Reason.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 30.—Emil Seidel, Milwaukee's Socialist mayor, declines to serve on a Roosevelt reception committee. He gives as his reason "the unscholarly and unfair position that Mr. Roosevelt has taken in the discussion of the movement for which I have spent all my spare time and energy."

In his letter to Frank Cannon, chairman of the reception committee of the Milwaukee Press club, whose guest Colonel Roosevelt will be next week, the mayor closes as follows:

"However, I wish to assure you that, as chief executive of the city, I extend to your guest the courtesy that every man is entitled to in a republic."

"Hoping that it will be possible for me to serve you and our city in other capacities in the future, I beg to remain, yours truly, EMIL SEIDEL."

Rome, Aug. 30.—It is said on good authority that among those who will receive the cardinal's red hat at the consistory next November are Archbishops Farley, of New York, and O'Connell, of Boston.

This will be the first consistory in three years.

Shortage Will Reach $300,000.

Biddeford, Vt., Aug. 30.—The estimated shortage in the accounts of former Treasurer Richard H. Ingersoll, of the York County Savings bank, will reach $300,000. It had been predicted that the shortage wouldn't exceed $100,000.

Killed by Falling Beam.

New York, Aug. 30.—Frank Keller and John McHugh, wreckers at work in the old Grand Central station, were struck by a falling beam. Keller was killed. McHugh was badly injured and may have a fracture of the skull.

Folks who live in town and have never had mail delivered to them by the rural carrier have little idea with how much expectancy the daily visits of the carrier are awaited. It may be the daily paper which keeps the members of the rural home in touch with the outside world or the regular letter from the folks far or near. The writer has received his mail by carrier the past few months and realizes more fully what the service must mean to all the folks on the 40,000 odd routes over the country.

SEIZE WOMAN'S $100,000 IN GEMS

Mrs. Adriance Must Prove Claim to Customs Agents.

ACCUSED OF SMUGGLING

Wife of Millionaire and Poughkeepsie Social Leader Held in $7500 Bonds For Further Hearing.

New York, Aug. 30.—Shortly after Mrs. I. Reynolds Adriance, social leader of Poughkeepsie, and wife of a millionaire, who is charged with smuggling a $6000 pearl necklace in the lining of her hat, had been released on $7500 bail by United States Commissioner Thomas Alexander, it became known that the necklace was but a small part of the seizure made by the customs inspectors.

The total value of jewels and lace taken possession of by the customs men is $115,000, and of this amount Mrs. Adriance insists that jewels valued at $100,000 were her property previous to her sailing for Europe.

The authorities declare that she must prove to their satisfaction that the entire collection of jewels were not purchased in Europe and brought in here without declaration.

C. C. Wall, special treasury agent, said that in the list of jewels claimed by Mrs. Adriance to have been in her possession before she went abroad is a collar with eleven strands of pearls that was probably worth $50,000 or $75,000. Mrs. Adriance insisted that this was purchased in New York.

When Mrs. Adriance, accompanied by her husband, son and daughter, went to Commissioner Alexander's office she was not apparently much upset and signed the bail bond with a steady hand.

Bond was entered by her husband, who gave as security his residence, Eden Court, at Poughkeepsie, which he said is worth not less than $50,000. He and his wife and daughter then left the building and hurried away.

The case will probably be taken up by the grand jury Thursday.

WOULD RAISE THE MAINE

John F. O'Rourke Tells President How He Will Remove the Wreck.

Beverly, Mass., Aug. 30.—President Taft sat on the vine covered veranda of his summer cottage and heard from John F. O'Rourke, president of the O'Rourke Engineering and Construction company, of New York, the story of how on next Christmas morning the hull of the Maine can be lifted clear of the waters in Havana harbor.

Mr. O'Rourke, whose company wants the contract for raising the wreck of the Maine, explained to Mr. Taft that the hull can be brought up in such perfect condition as to permit the whole world to determine whether the Spanish-American war was justified.

If Mr. O'Rourke's plan is carried out 1000 men wearing the uniform of the United States will man the jacks that will swing the ship's keel above the waves in a cradle of many cables. The wreck, for twelve years half buried in the mud at the bottom of the sea, will hang in her steel hammock in exactly the same crippled condition that sent her down, and the soldiers at the jacks, having secured her in her strange mooring, will at last recover the bodies of the men who were drowned when she sank.

DEAD ON THE MOOR

Body of Lady Marjorie Erskine Found in Scotland.

Glasgow, Aug. 30.—The body of a woman on which there was a large sum of money in notes and gold was found in a remote spot of the Scotch moors on Aug. 26. It has been identified as that of Lady Marjorie Erskine, second daughter of the Earl of Buchan.

Lady Erskine was a popular society woman. She has been missing for a month. The decomposition of the body makes it difficult to discover the cause of her death. There is no evidence of foul play, however, and it is believed she lost her way in the mor and died of exposure.

NICHOLAS PROCLAIMED KING

Ruler of Montenegro Received Enthusiastically by People.

Cettigne, Montenegro, Aug. 30.—The proclamation of the kingdom of Montenegro was received very enthusiastically by the populace. The members of the royal family marched in a procession to the cathedral, where they were received by the archbishop. Here the Te Deum was sung. The members of the diplomatic corps and visiting diplomats called at the royal palace and congratulated the king and his family. King Nicholas, in reply, thanked the visitors and his people.

A Bit of Detective Work

By C. L. DAYTON.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"Maggie, we're ruined!"

"Oh, Harry, what is it?"

"Mr. Brant has been murdered, and I shall be accused of the murder."

"How? Why?"

"We were together tonight since 8 o'clock in the bank, he to do some work on the statement to be made to the directors tomorrow, I to post my books. The janitor saw us go in together. Brant worked in his private office, I at my desk. When I finished I went to him to ask if he was ready to go home. I found him lying on the floor dead, the carpet covered with blood."

"And you came away without notifying any one?"

"Yes, the murderer will doubtless never be known. I will be arrested and made to suffer for his crime."

The wife, trembling while she thought what was best to be done and thought quickly. Presently she said, speaking rapidly:

"Whether you were right or wrong in not calling the police, you have made a step which is irrevocable. You must get away. Go and shave off your beard while I get some of my clothes ready for you."

Half an hour later Henry Hunt left his house disguised as a woman. He carried in a suit case male attire which he designed putting on as soon as he felt it best to do so. He was to notify his wife from time to time by a code as to his address.

The murder was not discovered till the next morning, and as Hunt had been with the cashier the night before and was missing, there was no doubt as to his being the murderer.

Great sympathy was manifested for Mrs. Hunt, who had been left not only with the obloquy of her husband's crime resting upon her, but without support for herself and her children. She had had the night before the murder was discovered to think over the matter and decided that it would be best, when questioned, for her to say that her husband had come home at 10 o'clock, that he had gone out and she had not seen him since. Under examination nothing more than this was to be got out of her.

Mrs. Hunt at once began the study of bookkeeping and in a few months applied to the president of the bank where her husband had been employed for a position. Her request was granted.

The new bookkeeper, on account of her inexperience—so she told the officers of the bank—found it necessary to work nights. She was given permission, and the janitor was instructed to admit her whenever she desired to enter.

Now, in all this there was a method. The more Mrs. Hunt thought over her husband's fight the more she was satisfied with the course he had taken. Not a scrap of evidence came up to incriminate any one else. It was believed that no other person could have entered the bank during the limit of time, and the murder could not have been done for the purpose of robbery, for no funds were taken. She saw no possible escape for her husband had he remained and faced the charge of murder.

Detectives were for a time secretly put on the case by the president of the bank with a view to ascertaining a motive for the killing of the cashier. But, no such motive being discovered, the matter was dropped. There was a detective at work on the case of whose efforts not a person connected with the bank was aware. Mrs. Hunt felt sure from the first that some one connected with the institution had committed the murder and that the murderer had a motive. The most reasonable theory was that there was a secret between the cashier and the murderer that would explain the motive.

Mrs. Hunt had been working but a few evenings when Horace Tift, head bookkeeper, found it necessary to work nights also. He offered to help Mrs. Hunt on her books, but she declined. One evening when they were together Mrs. Hunt, who had brought with her a sandwich and a bottle of milk, offered Tift a glass of the milk. He drank it and for several days afterward was laid up with an illness. When he recovered he resumed his night work on his books. He found Mrs. Hunt there and said to her:

"There was something in that milk you gave me to make me ill."

"Certainly there was. I put it there."

"What for?" asked Tift, turning pale. Mrs. Hunt raised the skirt of her dress, unslinging a revolver and laid it on her desk. Then she said:

"To work on your books. You are covering up a large delinquency."

Tift stood looking at her in terror. "My husband is a fugitive for your crime," added the woman.

"Tift had felt on his desk."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," pursued the woman. "I'll let you change places with him. Sign a confession of the murder and you may go into hiding."

The man took ten minutes to consider, then accepted the terms.

The next morning Tift was missing. Mrs. Hunt suggested that his books be examined. This was done and a delinquency of $100,000 discovered. Then she produced the defaulter's confession.

A DOLL

By DELIA TREVOR.

This story illustrates how much more powerful is kindness than brute force. Major Hopkins, commanding Fort —, garrisoned by two companies of cavalry, seeing some of his scouts approaching, rode out to meet them. As they approached he saw riding before the sergeants a little Indian girl about five years old.

"What have you there, sergeant?" "We were getting a peep, sir, at the devils from the bushes when this little tot came running right into us. There was nothing for us to do but seize her and clap a hand over her mouth. Then, of course, we had to bring her with us to prevent her crying drawing the reds after us."

"She must be returned, but it is too late today. We'll keep her till morning. But what did you learn?"

"They've got the war point on, and the whole tribe is wild. There must be between two and three thousand tepees, which would give them from 500 to 800 warriors."

The major turned and rode back to camp, motioning the sergeant to ride beside him and continue his report of the information he had gained. The prospect was not pleasant. There were not a hundred men for duty in the fort, which was an old fashioned affair, and the ammunition was low. The Indians would undoubtedly attack and if they kept up the siege long enough would certainly capture the fort. The logical end of this was a massacre of the whole garrison, including women and children.

Upon entering the inclosure the major dismounted, took the Indian child in his arms, lifted her from the horse and, taking her to his quarters, turned her over to his wife. Then he hurried away to prepare for a death struggle.

The little redskin stood stolidly where she was placed in the middle of the floor, her straight hair falling in any and every direction, her beady black eyes darting hither and thither. The white children clustered around her, gazing at her as an object of wonder. Being perfectly quiet, she needed no attention till the shades of night cast a gloom about her, when her child's Indian stoicism broke down and she began to cry.

Mrs. Hopkins endeavored to quiet her without effect. Little Maud Hopkins possessed a very beautiful doll with waxen head and shoulders and light, fluffy hair. Taking up this doll, her mother placed it in the arms of the tiny captive.

"There," she said, "if you'll cease crying you may have it to keep." Whether or not the child understood the words, she certainly understood the act. She hugged the doll against her breast, ceased weeping and soon fell asleep.

The next morning Major Hopkins ordered the sergeant who had captured the child, with a dozen cavalrymen, to take her back to the Indians. In doing so there was a risk of their being murdered. But the major, believing that the loss of the prisoner would tend to further irritate the savages, did not dare hold her. The child mounted before the sergeant, tightly holding her doll, looking out of her coal black eyes as if she would annihilate any one who attempted to deprive her of it, rode out of the fort toward the Indian village.

When the party was descried approaching a body of warriors, seizing their arms, prepared to receive them. But when the whites drew near and the captive was distinguished the women set up a howl of pleasure. Then when the child was clasped by her mother, still tightly holding her white doll, every Indian in the village crowded around to see.

When the sergeant and his men turned to ride back to the fort no effort was made to prevent them. Soon after their departure a powwow was called among the chiefs. Their preparations were all made to begin the attack on the fort, and in this incident they saw delay. The child that had been returned was taken to the covclave and set in the center of the circle with her doll. The Indian mother asked permission to go to the fort and thank the donor for her beautiful gift. After a long discussion the request was granted.

The same evening a band of Indians was seen approaching the fort. The whites at first considered them as an advance guard of the enemy coming to make the expected attack. But the redskins came on close under the stockade, and it was then seen that a squaw was among them. They asked for admittance, and the gates were thrown open. Upon entering the inclosure the object of the visit was made known, and the squaw was conducted to Major Hopkins' quarters. The Indian mother acquainted herself of her mission, and Mrs. Hopkins invited her to partake of refreshments.

The visit lasted several hours, and when the party returned the squaw bore a message of peace and good will to the Indians, including a promise from the commander of the fort that certain wrongs should be redressed and a request that they would return to their reservation. The terms were accepted, and the redskins took off the war paint.

Thus a long war with its attendant horrors was averted by a bit of motherly kindness to a child.

HORTICULTURE IN CENTRAL STATES.

The other day we received a letter from a young man, a former Iowa boy, who, in the course of making several inquiries as to climatic conditions, prices of land, etc., in Washington and Oregon, asked the very direct question whether we thought the outlook for horticulture in Iowa and other central and eastern states N. G. (no goods). He further asked whether if the same pains were taken in the care of the orchards and in the spraying and marketing of the fruit as are the rule in western orchard districts a considerable measure of success could not be had. The answer we made to his queries may be of interest to some others who may be thinking of taking up horticulture as an occupation.

There is little question that there are sections in western states which from the standpoint of climate are especially well suited to fruit raising. This has reference not only to a long growing season, but mild winters, dryness of atmosphere, abundant sunshine and in most sections water at hand, which can be turned on to plant, vine or tree at just the time when moisture is needed. But of almost equal importance with the favorable conditions mentioned are that organization and co-operation among fruit growers which result in systematic efforts in the fighting of insect pests, the uniform packing of fruit of finest quality and lastly, but just as important, the marketing of the produce raised in such manner as will secure a remunerative return for pains and labor expended.

Climatic conditions in central and eastern states cannot be changed, but wonders can be accomplished through the adoption of rational and up to date methods in orchard care, painstaking methods in harvesting, packing and marketing the fruit. With the western fruit growing is the business of first importance, and the central and eastern state resident must assume the same attitude if he would achieve a comparable success. In the matter of measures to consuming markets he has the distinct advantage of lower transportation rates, and this should serve to offset in a measure the westerner's advantage in point of climate. Western orchard methods are being adopted here and there farther east with signal success. Others may secure a like success, provided they exercise the same perseverance and intelligence.

A good share of that nasty roush in the barnyard following each heavy rain may be done away with by equipping the barnyard slope of the eaves with pigpots or trough, which will carry the water to the corner of the barn.

Many a farm could be transformed merely through the adoption of long time lenses, together with the following of such agricultural and stock raising methods as the tenant would feel justified in going into as a result of a longer tenure of the land.

MURDER IN THE CHICK COOP.

It's seldom mother hen's chicks eat each other alive. The dead one in the picture got mixed on mamma's, went to sleep in the wrong feather bed, and the next morning the old hen bit him and drew blood, and he chicks chewed him dead.

Brooder chicks are crack cannibals, and the White Leghorn is the Bloody Mary of them all.

Why is it any more? Well, here's our guess for what it's worth: A chick pulls off his toe nail in a crack, cuts himself on a wire screen.

EATING THEIR BROTHERS.

gets a wound from a large bird's beak, tumbles down the brooder steps or falls out the front door; blood starts or there's a toe wiggles like a worm; the murderers grab the victim and drag him to death.

Tender quills are pulled, and he bleeds. His foot web is punched carelessly, and he tracks blood. He gets food on his feet. Beef scrap, cut bone and raw meat are left where he tramps on them and carries them on his toes, and when these things happen he is mobbed.

Sometimes insects and worms are scarce or he is peened up and is fed no meat product. His system craves it. He gets blood crazy, and some chick becomes a martyr.

We watched this up, but by taking precautions now seldom see a chick.

These dead chicks are sometimes not seen. They are blown, and chicks eat them and get limberneck.

They are unobserved under hovers. Chicks sleep in the foul stench and die like flies.

Fowls crave meat. They thirst for blood. It should be satisfied by a meat food.

If you don't believe this, next time you cut your finger let the chicks have a chance at it. If this craving hasn't been supplied the little bloodhounds will try to swallow your finger whole.

DON'TS.

Don't forget to sow sunflowers. They add cheer to the landscape and a splendid item to the ration in molting season.

Don't let ducklings get into cold water or your little quacks will turn on their backs.

Don't pack eggs in buckwheat hulls or sawdust, and have all shipping cases light and tight.

Don't keep your chickens on the same old ground. The cholera microbe will soon be around.

Don't feed much corn to your little chicks. For young fry wheat is the standby.

Don't neglect to sow lettuce for young stock and feed sprouted oats by the block.

Act Well Your Part.

(From "Easy on Man.") Honor and shame come no condition free. Act well your part—there all the honor lies. Parting in men has some small difference made—One flaunts in rags, one flutters in brocade. The cobbler apron'd and the parson gown'd. The friar hooded and the monarch crown'd. "What differ more," you cry, "than crown and cowl?" I'll tell you, friend, a wise man and a fool. You'll find if once the monarch acts the monk Or cobbler-like, the parson will be drunk. Worth makes the man and want of it the fellow. The rest is all but leather or prunella. —Pope.

A JOINT RESOLUTION.
Proposing an amendment to section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof:

Amendment to Article Nine, Section Eight.

Section 2. Amend section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:

"Section 8. The debt of any county, if, as is said, beet sugar manufacturers are making close to 50 per cent on the money they have invested in their plants the price they hand out to the grower—$4 to $5 per ton—looks a good deal like 30 cents when one figures the risk involved in carrying the crop from seedling time to storage bin. In the corn belt, at least, where a fellow can raise fifty bushels of corn per acre and get from 50 to 70 cents per bushel, the beet sugar industry on the five dollar basis is making pretty slow progress."

city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation, so as to read as follows:

Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation, except that any debt or debts hereinafter incurred by the city and county of Philadelphia for the construction and development of subways for transit purposes, or for the construction of wharves and docks, or the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of a system of wharves and docks, as public improvements, owned or to be owned by the city and county of Philadelphia, and which shall yield to the city and county of Philadelphia current net revenue in excess of the interest on said debt or debts and of the annual installments necessary for the cancellation of said debt or debts, may be excluded in ascertaining the power of the city and county of Philadelphia to become otherwise indebted. Provided, That a sinking fund for their cancellation shall be established and maintained.

POULTRY NOTES BY C. M. BARNITZ, RIVERSIDE, PA.

LOOKING BACKWARD IN 2000 A. D.

Thou, where is London, England's pride,
Where Dickens wrote and Gladstone spoke?
Vias, alas, her ruins wide!
The whole shebang went up in smoke.

And, thou, O Paris, fairy gay,
And Berlin, hoch der kaiser great,
Th, whence, oh, hence, oh, where away?
What swiped you off the nation's slate?

And thou, O Russia of the czar,
And thou, Japan, so great in war,
I see thee not upon the map.
Where art thou? What was thy mishap?

Thou, Rome, proud Rome, that ruled the world,
From off thy seven wondrous hills,
Why standest thou on guard no more
Upon yon rolling Tiber's shore?

Oh, did an earthquake wreak this ruin?
Was it a tidal wave?
Did Halley's comet wag his tail
And send them to the grave?

Oh, no, an airship sailed above,
A thousand miles on high,
And let them have a bonny broadside
From out a clear blue sky!

But did they use much dynamite
To knock them off their pegs?
No, no; they simply dropped a few
Real fresh, cold storage eggs!

C. M. BARNITZ.

INSTALL A SILO.

There is hardly any improvement that can be added to the farm equipment in dairying or stock raising sections where corn can be grown that will mean a more economical bill of fare the coming winter than the installing of a silo. The structure may be built of wooden staves or concrete, hollow blocks reinforced with steel, and should be 20 to 30 feet to furnish the silage necessary on the average 100 acre farm. A silo of the size mentioned will hold 200 tons of ensilage. The cost of such silo will run from $200 to $450, depending upon materials used, whether the gravel and sand are handy for the cement and how much of the work has to be hired.

A good plan for one who intends building a silo is to take a day or two off and visit several farms where silos of different types are in successful operation. The corn for the silo will have a maximum fodder value if cut just after it has begun to dent. The silo can be filled rain or shine, and if the crop is secured in this way there is avoidance of the risk of an early killing frost, which so frequently injures the ear crop.

ABOUT HIRED GIRLS.

We know a bright young girl who, following her graduation from the high school, accepted a position in a good home to help with the housework until fall, when she was to begin study at a teachers' training school. This girl had very good sense and showed a most commendable independence. Can some one tell why it is that girls and women as a class frown down upon those who receive remuneration for doing housework when there is little question that dirty, untempt homes, soggy biscuits, sour bread and ill fitting gowns are responsible yearly for more divorces than a lack of grammar, French or psychology? Yet, for all this, there is many a community where hired girls are frowned down upon and made to feel that they belong to an inferior class or set. It is time for a change—for the elevating of housework to the honorable position which it certainly should have and an honoring of those who have a hand in it, whether as wives, mothers, sisters or those who receive a stipulated pay for the service they render.

A mare has this advantage over a gelding—that when she has been injured in such a way as to unfit her for work she can raise just as good colts as when she was sound.

The dry spell which has prevailed in many of the north central states, greatly reducing the efficiency of the pastures, is not bearing so heavily upon the fellows who have silos and who are able to supplement the short pastures with a good ration of silage secured last fall. Thousands of other stock feeders and dairymen bought to have this economical safeguard against periods of drought. It would be simply a matter of foresight and good management.

Those who are suggesting seriously that our children and grandchildren may lack for the food wherewith to nourish their bodies have not taken stock of the fact that at present but one acre out of six is under tillage in the United States and that this acre is producing but half a normal crop of wheat, one-third of a normal crop of corn, of cotton less than a half crop and potatoes but one half.
